New Crisis Reached by Pershing

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 26 (AP)—Intense excitement around the hospital room of General John J. Pershing shortly after 7 a. m. (P. a. m. EST.) today indicated the weakening warrior had reached a new crisis and that the end might be at hand.

A moment later Dr. Roland Davidson sent out a bulletin announcing the General was gradually becoming weaker.
"He is unable to take nourishment or drink," Dr. Davidson's bulletin said. "His kidneys have ceased to function."
The bulletin was brought from the patient's room by the General's physician, Frank Pershing, Dr. Davidson apparently was unwilling to leave the bedside.

General Pershing had been under no oxygen treatment of the night, but when an assistant arrived to change the tank he was told to more oxygen would be needed.
The 74-year-old commander, shortly after midnight, brought a favorable reaction. Physicians, however, announced the rally was short and that he soon began losing ground again.
The family was summoned to the General's room a few minutes before 7 a. m.

IN COMA AFTER RALLY
The General's rally followed hours of unconsciousness during which the doctors announced, as on the previous night, that he could not last much longer.
In the belief the end was near, arrangements were made for the War Department to send the commander's old uniform from Washington by plane. It was understood General Pershing desired to be buried in it.

Dr. Davidson and Lieutenant Colonel S. U. Marietta held little hope for the recovery of their patient and have made preparations for a possible burial transaction.
Arrangements have been made with the Southern Pacific Railroad by Major-General Herbert J. Brees, commander of the Eight Corps Area, for a special train to Washington in event of death.

JUSTICE CARDOZO Gravely Ill
WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 (AP)—Associate Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo is so ill that he probably never can return to his Supreme Court duties, it was learned today.
For many weeks with a heart ailment, the justice recently suffered a stroke and his left side was paralyzed. While his life is not immediately endangered, it was reported, his condition is such as to preclude any thought of his resuming his seat on the bench.

Lion Pens on Way? Legal Aid Pledged To 'Caged' Drunks

Att'y. Bushell Will Act, Free, If Woburn Mayor Carries Out His Pillory Plan
Incensed at the move of Mayor William E. Kane to "cage drunks" in Woburn, former Assistant District Attorney Edward J. Bushell of Middlesex County today offered free counsel to the first one caged.

Mayor Kane had announced a plan to put drunks in an old cage and parade them through Woburn. Attorney Bushell said:
"I don't believe Mayor Kane is serious about the idea. I think he is just a smart publicity stunt, and as such he has done all right for himself.
"What most people overlook, however, as they read all these headlines is that Mayor Kane is an attorney, and of course knows his rights. He could never get away with his plan."
"I'll personally offer my services free to any victims of such pitiless. After all, an interested person has some rights in this state."

GOING AFTER CAGES
Even as the former prosecutor offered his services, the Woburn mayor proceeded today with his plan to introduce the animal cage treatment for the intoxicated.
"What most people are talking about is that I am going up to Benson's farm in Nahant this afternoon to get out one or two or three cages. I should continue on Page 2, Column 3

Sleeping nuns in an Aetna street house were awakened early today when a wheel, flying off an automobile, crashed through their front window.

James Roosevelt Resumes Hop Today
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP)—James Roosevelt, son of the President, arrived here today in a police ambulance to resume his tour of inspection of the Florida Power and Light Co. plant at Ft. Pierce. He was the first on a flight that will take young Roosevelt to Miami, Fla., and back to Washington in a few days.

Woman Rescued From Quincy Creek
A 45-year-old Quincy woman was rescued by five Works Progress Administration workers today when she fell into Black's Creek, near the Furnace Brook highway.
The woman, Mrs. Annie Mitchell, of Washington street, Quincy, was taken in a police ambulance to Quincy City Hospital. She was found suffering from shock and immersion.

Rescue Four Paris Warms After Nazis, Hints Italy Pact

LOWELL, Feb. 26—Four Boston & Maine railroad employees, repairing a trestle above the Concord river, were plunged 20 feet into the icy waters today when a rope supporting a staging broke.
The men, three of whom were more than 20 years old, were rescued by a police boat as they clung to planks of the staging, reeling at the same time, which they used as buoys.
They were identified as Joseph D. Niteau, 34, of Merrimack street; Lowell; Melvin F. Fountain, 24, of West Thornton, N. H.; Roy Tewksbury, 24, of Concord, N. H.; and John Wheeler, 31, of North Haverhill, N. H.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL
Niteau and Fountain were rushed to St. John's Hospital and the others to St. Joseph's Hospital. They were suffering from shock and immersion and physicians said they would recover.
The foreman of the job, Victor Gouin, of Concord, N. H., witnessed the plunge and ran 300 yards to the nearest phone in the office of the Lowell Committee to summon police.

POLICE BOAT CALLED
Firemen also rushed to the scene, but first to reach the men was the police boat, directed by Police Superintendent Michael H. Winn and manned by Inspector Frank J. O'Dea and Officers Patrick E. Clark and William P. Doherty.
Ambulances, which had been held in readiness, took the men to the hospital.

Cutter Rushes III Seaman to Boston
A choppy sea five miles outside Boston harbor Edward Hanson, 28, a seaman of Tornaburn, Norway, suffering appendicitis, was transferred from the Norwegian motorship Tampa to a coast guard cutter early today.
He was taken to Commercial Wharf where an ambulance from Chelsea Marine Hospital was waiting.

Child, 10, Finds Toy Dog's Twin
Lieutenant Thomas McMurry of the Joy street station rubbed his eyes twice today when he peered over the booking desk at what he thought was a duplicate of which he had seen before.
The child explained she had found the live one wandering on Beacon street.

HOPEFULLY WAITS AS NO ONE CLAIMS PUP
Lieutenant McMurry said that if no one should appear and claim the pup, he would be placed in a cage and taken to the station for a while to see if any owner showed up.
The pup was still waiting with fingers crossed, at noon.

Baba 'White Sheep' Papa Restores Allowance

PARIS, Feb. 26 (AP)—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos issued an implied warning to Germany today to keep Nazi hands off France Central European allies.
In his first public pronouncement of French intentions since the rise of Nazi influence in Austria and the turn of Britain toward deals with dictators, Delbos told the Chamber of Deputies, France would follow England's lead but would not desert her small friends.
At the same time that he declared Austria must be kept independent and warned against setting up any political hegemony in Central Europe, Delbos made a friendly bid to Italy, Germany's ally in the Rome-Berlin axis.

WARNING TO GERMANY
Informed political quarters said Delbos undoubtedly was warning Germany that France remained faithful to Austria as well as her little allies, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania.
Under existing treaties France is bound to send military aid to Czechoslovakia in case that neighbor of Germany is attacked. It was that treaty which Delbos referred when he fully declared France's obligations to Czechoslovakia "will be faithfully fulfilled."
Delbos told the Chamber of Deputies today the French government would not desert her small friends.

6 Air Bombers Hop To Cristobal Today
BALBOA, C. Z., Feb. 26 (AP)—Six American bombers, which had been without a hitch in six hours, 43 minutes, the six "flying fortresses" of the United States Army arrived at Rock Field.
The big four-motored bombers, which had flown from Virginia to Buenos Aires, will go to Cristobal today, on route back to the United States.

Guppies Just Plain Fish to This Cat
PITTSBURGH, Feb. 26 (AP)—Ruffin, the cat of the Carnegie Institute, had the feast of her life today when she was served a temperature broke a 43-degree Fahrenheit.
The tank contained what the institute's scientists, a cat named Ruffin, had just caught. They tasted just like any other fish, she said.

ROOSEVELT CAN'T WIN 3D TERM SAYS SEN. WHEELER HERE
This state-born in Hudson—observed his 66th birthday today.
At a press conference shortly after his arrival, he declared:
"If the President is a candidate for a third term, he undoubtedly will be nominated. But I don't think anybody should be elected for a third term."
After revealing his personal plans concerning the 1940 election, Senator Wheeler asserted that he did not believe people would go back to what he termed "any kind of a third term."

PRINCESS BABA OF SARAWAK She's "In the Dough" Again
The beautiful Princess Baba, daughter of the white Rajah of Sarawak, today was forgiven by her father and restored to the $300,000 allowance he stopped after her marriage to Bob Gregory, English wrestler.
The blonde princess heard the good news at Buffalo, N. Y., where she saw her husband and her second son, a professional wrestling pugilist in America.
News of parental forgiveness came from Singapore, where it was learned that Sir Charles V. Brookes had relented.
After revealing that the allowance had been cut for three months, Sir Charles said:
"I bear nobody ill will and I hope to see my daughter and her husband in England."
"She is in receipt of her regular allowance from now on, although even during the last three months I have paid a great number of her bills."
"I met Gregory last July but I was interested in him merely as a wrestler," the rajah concluded.
Princess Baba said in dignified tones at Buffalo while police rushed to the ringside to throw out disturbers, who repeatedly burst the charge of "raider" at her good-looking husband's side.

Governor Hurley today called for 'Facts'

Governor Hurley today called for David L. Williams, state commissioner of mental diseases, to name the high public official he charged struck him on the jaw on the eve of an illness from which he has not as yet fully recovered.
In an interview with the Boston Evening American the governor declared:
"Dr. Williams says he was struck by a high state official and that this blow is probable responsible for his illness. Well, let him name that official. There is nothing to hide. If he names the official we'll soon get to the bottom of the charge."

D. Williams' accusation came as a sequel to the recent removal of his name from the state payroll, an act which he charged was another attempt to force his resignation.
Details of this alleged assault as well as a second one, have been placed in the hands of an attorney, Dr. Williams said, as basis for defense against what he characterizes as persecution by men high in the State's political circles.

STUNNED BY BLOW
The official tried to persuade him to grant a produce merchant a contract for sale of vegetables in a certain hospital, Dr. Williams stated.
"We talked on my front porch for about five minutes," he continued, "and when I closed the interview by flitting turning him down he struck me with his fist."
"I was partly stunned by the blow."

Rumblings of Forcing New Debate Creates Stir in Commons

By KINGSBURY SMITH

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Rumblings of forcing a new debate in the House of Commons, Laborite parliamentarians prepared today to unleash their heavy guns against Lord Halifax, whose appointment as foreign secretary succeeding Anthony Eden, stirred new wrath in the hearts of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's political foes.

Meanwhile, it was claimed that in view of Chamberlain's recent speech to the House of Commons, asserting his nation's independence, Chamberlain considers there is no need of sending a deputation to Germany concerning Chamberlain's "coup" in Austria.

STRESS FIRMNESS
Opponents of Chamberlain's plan to send an understanding to Italy, and Germany as a basis of European peace, were again mentioned in the speech by Eden at Westminster, calling on the government not to consider the Paris and Washington while working for a Munich and Chamberlain's Hitler.

Defending his resignation from the cabinet, Eden told his colleagues in the sphere of international affairs, it is the government's duty at this time to be vigilant and firm.

"It is well to seek to lay to rest the old friends. It is to the great democracies of Europe and America that our natural affinities must lie. Eden disavowed any intention to had organized opposition to the government, but stated that Chamberlain's policy will fail to establish peace.

SEEK U. S. FACT

Retaliating his contention that now the best communications received in London preceded Chamberlain's decision to talk with Italy, Eden said that he had not resigned when the cabinet called to take his advice, "I should have desisted myself."

But he softened the sting of his words by adding:

"I most sincerely wish success to their (the government's) efforts."

Chamberlain and his colleagues, however, expected to whip France into line for the prime minister's ultimatum goal—an Anglo-French-Italian-Nazi pact of pacification.

At the same time, striving to maintain close and friendly relations with the United States, the government will spare no effort to hammer out a trade treaty with Washington.

As his contribution, Mr. Eden was reported ready to renounce any editorial claims in Spain or the mainland islands, thus relieving of increasing tensions for termination of Anglo-German tension in the Mediterranean.

Austria Splits Over Nazis; Chancellor Faces Vote

VIENNA, Feb. 26 (AP)—Austrian Chancellor Schuschnigg, with the nation splitting over and more into Nazi and anti-Nazi camps, faced today the prospect of a referendum to determine whether he had the support of his fatherland.

There was high resentment among the Nazis against Schuschnigg's determination to keep the nation neutral between Germany and England, and the anti-Nazi party the status of legality in Austria.

Political circles believed that a number of both left and right supporters of Schuschnigg also were presumably because they feared Nazi pressure might force the Chancellor to give in to their demands.

NAZI ARK ACTION

While the nation was quiet, local Nazi leaders were clamoring for action by their chieftains against the government's peace program.

The Austrian front, Schuschnigg's political and the nation's only legal party, was studying plans for the vote. Schuschnigg intended.

MUST ASK ELECTION

Political circles held that such an election must be held soon. "If it is" because both leftists and rightists would be during the Reichstag elections dealing with German Fuehrer Hitler, was waving "more and more."

Large pro-Schuschnigg demonstrations were held over one night, however, in Innsbruck, and the government was counting on a public works program to offset discontent.

END WAR BARBARITIES

Delors spoke in the Chamber's foreign affairs debate to declare France in accord with Chamberlain's policy for reaching peace agreements with Italy and Germany.

BACKS SOVIET FACT

At the same time, Delors made clear his intention to keep France's obligations toward Czechoslovakia, and the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact.

Delors' government will not seek to avoid obligations toward Czechoslovakia, he announced, and his rights as a great power, he could never

"I still have confidence in the Franco-Soviet pact. The government intends to put it above and outside of political quarrels."

Shortly before Delors began his address, it became known France already was entering upon commercial negotiations with Rome to replace normal business as it is used before sanctions were imposed during the Italo-Ethiopian campaign.

Delors, returning to the question of Italy's obligations to the League of Nations, declared that France would not be drawn into a conflict with Czechoslovakia with regard to Czechoslovakia will be

He said the government "will have confidence in the League of Nations."

Delors went on to say that there was absolutely no difference between us and Chamberlain. "Then he paid tribute to the ability of Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign secretary of Great Britain, during the recent upheaval."

After an attacking French readiness to help Chamberlain, Delors touched only slightly on the current situation created by Nazi encroachment in Austria.

Zorina, Beautiful, Fed Up With Face

Never Gave It Thought Until Hollywood, Says Ballet Star

By PEGGY DOYLE

Zorina, the beautiful, never gave her face a thought until she took it to Hollywood.

She is the enchanting creature who does those lovely ballet numbers in "The Golden Earrings," which is being shown at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

In Boston yesterday to make personal appearances at both theaters, she revealed the secret that when she was here with the Ballet Russe, nobody made any fuss about her face, and that life would be utterly normal if she could forget her face.

"I never gave it a thought, my face, I mean, until Mr. Samuel Goldwyn brought me to Hollywood," she said. "Then, I discovered that the right side of my face photographs better than the left and that a pinpoint of light on too much of one little eye can cause a director to 'shoot a scene all over again.'"

"I adore Hollywood—the climate, the air, the palm-trees that someone always lends like stage props to me, the California sports clothes, the hairdressers, make-up-men and electricians who can be so kind and helpful towards a scared newcomer."

"But I am bored with being famous here. I'm fed up with my face."

SHE CAN DO THAT

Of course it is sacrilege to talk that way about a face like Zorina's, even if it is Zorina saying it. She is the most beautiful, most charming, pale but not pallid, large, serene brown-eyed, black-haired, blonde-haired, black-eyed, perfect, perfect, white teeth and a wide, finely cut mouth, which she wears on her long, tapering finger nails, and dark-brown hair.

A finely-placed, deep, dark, dark-brown, with matching pumps and wide patent-leather shoes, was the perfect costume for the slim, slender, Russian, she chose the Russian name, Vera Zorina.

Now, she will be returning to Boston in the Dwight Deane Wiman show, "I Married An Angel," which opens here April 4 before its New York engagement. She will play the little angel, opposite Dennis King. In the summer, she will be returning to Hollywood to appear with Jacques Haffitz in "The Great World of Pauline."

IT HAS HAPPENED HERE

But her greatest ambition is realized in none of these achievements. This serene 20-year-old beauty revealed.

"I was her face laughing out at her from a newspaper complexion soap advertisement that represented the top of the world to her."

"I was a little girl in Berlin studying dancing, having one's face in a complexion soap ad seemed to me the height of fame. And now it's happened."

Cardinal Issues Rules For Lenten Observance

Lenten rules and regulations for Catholics to be read at all masses tomorrow were released from the Archdiocese House in Brighton today.

"—All the days of Lent, except Sundays, are fast days. The Lenten fast ends at noon on Holy Saturday."

"—All between the ages of 21 and 58 inclusively are obliged to fast, except the sick and convalescent; those to whom fasting would cause grave injury to health, or would involve such physical exhaustion as would interfere with their daily duties."

"—Also those whose occupations are of a very laborious and exhausting nature. Those who doubt whether they are excused or not should consult their confessor."

"—Those obliged to fast are allowed but one full meal, either at noon or in the evening."

"—During Lent, every Wednesday and Friday, the second Sunday and Holy Saturday until Palm are days of abstinence."

Former Mayors Of City Blamed For Finances

But Better Times Are Ahead, Says Henry Parkman, Jr.

Boston's financial problems can be blamed to the administrations of the last 10 years, according to Corporation Counsel Henry Parkman, Jr., the man credited more than anyone else with election of Mayor Tobin.

"Since the mayors are being cited for their successors, even unto the third and fourth successors," Parkman told members of the Real Estate Association at their annual meeting at the Twentieth Century Club.

BETTER TIMES SEEN Parkman stated that Mayor Tobin was facing the problems frankly and with courage, and that better times were in the offing for Bostonians.

"During the boom period, public officials anxious to keep the rate down, they figured on being candidates for higher office, looked the real estate assessments until there was no reason for the valuations. Now we have business properties and residences in this district on our hands. No one had the courage to face these high valuations during the past 10 years."

BAD RELATIONS CITED

"From my experience I think we can say that Boston's bad relations with the Legislature are due to the fact that there is no confidence in the city left at Beacon Hill."

"There was no assurance of a balanced administration. East Boston tunnel shows a $400,000 deficit and with so many cars coming from and going to destinations outside of Boston."

"Last Boston star in its own juice" is an attitude on Beacon Hill which has its justifications. However, we have a different attitude with an administration in City Hall which is facing its facts frankly and dealing with integrity and sincerity."

General Johnson Says: BAD FAITH RIFE

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb. 26.—"It's none of our business," Every time we think of the incredible developments in Europe and Asia, we should say that at the beginning, between every thought, and at the end, so.

It's none of our business but the reason Captain Eden is right and Mr. Chamberlain is wrong is that any kind of agreement or understanding, expressed or implied, with Hitler or Mussolini isn't worth the breath or paper or ink with which it is uttered. It's none of our business, but how can that simple statement be doubted? They have repudiated every solemn international engagement they have made since the war. How can anybody rely on the promises of a repudiator?

Japan says she would consider a non-aggression treaty with us. That is our promise, but how can we rely on any promise that Japan might make? She has also repudiated every international peace agreement she has made since the war. She would keep it as long as it was expedient and not one moment longer.

It might be thought that Japan's repudiation of her promise to pay its debts in a certain weight and measure of gold is repudiated that promise to its own people with equal ruthlessness as the gangster nations have repudiated every promise they ever made to their counterparties.

I was Macbeth who said that honor and honesty are only for private individuals—that the will of the people or a prince cannot be based on any such chivalric adherence to truth and promise. They are only copy-book maxims for children.

I have heard exactly that idea expressed by a cabinet officer. Even if it were never expressed, the administration could never deny it as a principle. The repudiation of the gold clause in the bonds is the same.

Is that right? It is good policy or a bad policy, but it is a policy of repudiation. The whole structure of business rests on promises, to deliver, to pay, to perform.

In international relations there is no law. The peace of the world must stand or fall either by the balance of military power or by treaties—promises and faith in them.

Except for that terrible and inexcusable example of the gold bonds, our nation has lived up to its engagements better than any. And American society and business still insist that a repudiator of accepted obligations is beyond the pale. But in international relations, honor and honesty are not a sticky yet, are at least unhelpful. The only remaining guarantee of peace in the world is force, balancing force.

Hitler is growing like a many-colored cloud on a dunghill over the ruins of European democracy is none of our business—so far as Europe is concerned. But so far as this country is concerned, it is a threat of defiance that he will by force and arms take what he can and keep what he takes.

Suppose heavily Germanized provinces in Russia or Argentina should declare an alliance with Hitler and would send troops to Mexico. That is not new highly unlikely but it is a possibility because it has been done. What would we do?

What Hitler or Mussolini do in Europe is none of our business, but this hemisphere is distinctly our business. There is no law but force and we have had our warning.

Snore Cost Him a Bride

'Too Much Noise,' Says Widow

CHICAGO, Feb. 26 (NS)—It appeared today that Anton Oudein, 34, had just secured himself out of $500 and a prospective bride. As a snorer, Judge Thomas A. Green was told Oudein's practically total. When he lay back, snored his mouth slightly and let go. Mrs. Martha Zielinsky testified that the walls of her rooming house reverberated.

All the time when Oudein came in court with the charge that Mrs. Zielinsky, a widow, had promised to marry him and had not done it. His wife he gave back $500 he said he had invested in her three buildings.

"How," asked Mrs. Zielinsky, "could you expect me to marry a man who makes that much noise snoring?"

"The reason is sound," began Judge George Wright, "and that is."

"And what a sound!" asked the widow.

"Case is dismissed," said the judge.

CHAPTER 47

WHILE Greefy was saying his last words, an ambulance surgeon from City Hospital had been working over Big Gus. He found Greefy's bullet had shattered the racket boss's collar-bone. It then had ranged downward apparently without striking any vital spot.

"Who was this man you had killed, Mornick?" demanded Detective Capt. Sheehan, of the homicide squad.

"Aw, kid! Kid!" groaned Big Gus. "Can't you tell that mug Greefy was havin' a pipe-dream? He's just a guy who got sore, and tried to blast me. There was a shrill laugh. It was the 'Doc'.

"That's a lie!" he cried, instantly. "Koopman told the cops I killed him. I can't be turned up. I killed him for Mornick, and I did it. It was a good thing to do."

"You claimed the discredited physician, and you were from him—how he'd encouraged him how he'd liked to play with dolls, lured him to Mornick's crime fortress."

"He was a dangerous man," said the 'Doc'. "When I was practicing, I recommended he be sent to the insane asylum. But he had money or influence, and they let him out."

"When I saw him, he was talking to a child. He was a dangerous man to children. He had almost killed one child, and he must have killed others. He couldn't help it; he was diseased mentally. So I killed him. I gave him a cyanide capsule, and he never knew it. I trusted him. I was a benefactor of the human race when I did it."

"Yes," broke in Captain Sheehan, "but you got paid for being a benefactor, didn't you?"

"The 'Doc' broke into tears.

"Yes, yes, I did. Gus Mornick gave me $200. And I took it. What a disgrace to my profession!"

"Another head?" sneered Big Gus, from his chair. "Ask him if I told him to ask anybody!"

"The 'Doc' started.

"No," he said, in his speaking to himself. "He didn't. He told me to get a body—a stiff, he called it. But that was what he meant."

"You see?" said Big Gus. "I'm clear. It's a lot of bologna. Come on, you fellows, get me to a hospital. Then he shrank back before the big gaunt man who was standing over him.

"So you're clear are you, you dirty crook?" rumbled Barney Kelly, framing an innocent boy into the chair. And you're clear? Well, hear this in mind—your're not clear with me! In jail or out, you'll never be clear! So, if you're wise, you'll stay in jail!"

Looking into those fierce, blue eyes, Big Gus Mornick knew Barney Kelly meant it, and what was more, would keep on meaning it.

"Get me out of here!" he cried, and there was a whimper of fear in his voice. "Get me out!"

After officers had taken the broken racket boss away, Barney Kelly turned to Jerry O'Donovan.

"And now," said the former detective sergeant, with a glint of humor in his face, "I'd like to know how you, you young squirt, came to beat me to this punch?"

"The 'Doc' broke into tears. "Yes, yes, I did. Gus Mornick gave me $200. And I took it. What a disgrace to my profession!"

"Another head?" sneered Big Gus, from his chair. "Ask him if I told him to ask anybody!"

"The 'Doc' started.

"No," he said, in his speaking to himself. "He didn't. He told me to get a body—a stiff, he called it. But that was what he meant."

What Has Gone Before in This Serial

GENUINE, decent, lovely. That's Sheila Kelly, of South Boston, heroine of this novel, who trips down the steps of the State House into a maelstrom of adventure and romance. Type of the best in Boston is the Kelly family—father Sgt. Bernard F. Kelly, police strike veteran; and devoted wife, Nora; their children, Sheila, Patricia, Michael, Delphine (Patsy, Mickey, and Del).

Sheila is a temporary State House employee when the story opens. She is the only man to be a member of the Kelly family (Jerry O'Donovan, of Roxbury, former B. C. football star, and rising figure in Boston politics).

Accident brings her into contact with Bradford C. Talton, Beacon street, Harvard, and Social Register. Though she does not encourage his attentions Jerry grows jealous, and she drops the Harvard youth.

But chance brings them together again, and Sheila finds herself won by Brad's charm—despite the fact that she rejects his proposal of marriage.

Like a gay echo of Sheila's love complications, is the romance of her 17-year-old sister, Patsy, and White Fronts Brad's Harvard roommate. Too young to wed without parental approval, and unwilling to get that, the pair elope to Naples, N. H. But Patsy postpones her honeymoon to go to Ireland with her parents on a long-planned trip, financed by Del.

A sinister element enters the affairs of the Kelly family when Big Gus Mornick, Boston racket boss, seeks to obtain possession of a coded police report on racketeering, which Sheila has typed.

His fury turns against Jerry O'Donovan when Jerry, campaigning successfully for city council, promises to clean up the racket—number pool, bookmaking, and so on.

Meanwhile, Sheila Barton, of Jamaica Plain, Delphine's cousin, husband, blunders into Mornick's net by being among the innocent bystanders when Greefy Koopman, a Mornick gunman, accidentally kills Mornick.

Other early developments of the story are familiar to readers. Recent chapters are concerned with the development of Mornick's plan to entrap Mickey.

Sure that Jerry's devotion to Sheila will lead him to make any sacrifice, the racket boss "frames" Mickey as a murder rap. Sheila, he reasons, will induce Jerry to drop his anti-racket campaign to save Mickey from the chair.

Greefy wants to see Vince as the murder victim, but Big Gus disagrees. He has a soft spot for crooners, and, besides, he can hold Vince as a threat over Greefy. So he instructs the "Doc" to be satisfied as physician, to find a female who resembles Vince. The "Doc" finds one. Gus hides Vince, which Mickey is determined to get out of a hospital.

Greefy pretends to be hit by Del's car, which Mickey is driving. Mickey then takes Mickey to a hospital. En route, he alleges Mickey into insensibility, does him, pours whiskey on his clothes. Mickey recovers consciousness in a Poutchuck police station, and is taken to a nurse's apartment. He finds Del's car has been burned, and that a man's body has been found in the ruins. Greefy thinks it is a murder's body.

Jerry sets out to free Mickey. Sheila, doubting Jerry, believes her brother innocent, cables her father to return from Ireland. Jerry finds an important clue at the murder scene. He believes that Mickey has been killed by a promoter. Jerry finds out that Mickey has been killed by a promoter. Jerry finds out that Mickey has been killed by a promoter.

Pat and Mickey and Patsy return from Ireland, and Barney Kelly plunges into work of freeing Mickey. Jerry O'Donovan gets a hint as to the power behind Mickey's arrest. A radio broadcast induces Vince to call Jerry from Williamsburg, where Vince is a prisoner. Jerry finds storm has disrupted air service to Albany, nearest airport. Then he meets Brad, leader of emergency. Brad flies O'Donovan to Wallingtown, where they make a time to rescue Vince and bring him back to Boston. Vince appears at Gus Mornick's headquarters. Greefy, seeing Mickey, who Mornick has double-crossed him, and he and the racket boss fire together. Greefy is fatally hurt, and Mornick injured. Greefy confesses details of plot before he dies.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THIS THRILLING SERIAL STORY

IT was next day, at Jerry's office in Barristers' Hall, that the story came out of the amazing story of how old Barney had come back after he was twenty years—to save his son and prove again that he was an ace detective.

Mickey, fully exonerated, and again at liberty, was among the listeners. Ma Kelly was there, too. And, of course, Sheila and Patsy. They hadn't left Mickey from the moment he stepped out of Charles street jail.

Brad Talton was conspicuous by his absence.

In the telling of the story, it developed among other things, that the constituted authorities were not so far behind Big Gus Mornick at the end.

They'd been working quietly away—Captain Sheehan and the personnel of the anti-racket squad, under orders of Police Commissioner Timilty; Capt. John F. Stokes for the state police; Capt. Joseph Rooney for the Metropolitan force; and assistant investigators for District Attorney Foley.

They'd cooperated to the full, and Jerry to find their quarry already brought down by Greefy's plan.

Barney had decided his son was innocent when Sheila told him about the whiskey on Mickey's clothes.

"Not because the boy didn't drink," declared the Kelly family explained. "Any boy had convinced him it was a gang job. At first, he'd gone off on a false scent. He worked on the theory that gang politics had taken the accident to get possession of a car—any car—and that Mickey had accidentally been the victim of the racket boss's plan. But that didn't jibe with the bullets in Mickey's pockets, nor with other indications of a prearranged plan to rescue Vince and bring him back to Boston. And a plot it was, he was sure.

The rest had been deduction. Mickey, he'd found, had no real enemies. Nor had any other member of the immediate family. Who else? Jerry?

"I reasoned farcically," said Barney, when he reached this point, "but crooks didn't think like other people. They've got twisted minds. So I asked, 'Who else?'"

And right away they told me the racketeers. And who was the boss of the racket? This murderer Mornick!"

He did not expect the next step had been to obtain Bertillon pictures of Mornick's known associates from the police identification bureau. He'd managed it. Mickey and I still think Mickey had picked Greefy Koopman as the one most likely to be the intended victim.

"From then on," said Barney, "it was as simple as ringing a bell. But it was too bad you got ahead of me. Because if I ever had a chance to work over those two murderers—the way we used to work dig up that worthless Barton, and how did you know the right of him would make those two crooks turn on each other?"

As briefly as he could Jerry related everything—omitting only the detail of the scarf-clasp. Because things like that could get around, and he could still be counted for concealing evidence from the authorities. But he admitted frankly he'd doubted Mickey's story, and had devised his successful plan for locating Vince only as a forlorn hope.

Vince, of course, had given the clue that led to Mornick, while flying back to Boston in Brad's plane. To Mornick's motive, too—through something he'd overheard without understanding. And it was Vince, alone, who'd led Jerry to the door of the now-dreaded racket boss's quarters.

"To tell the truth," said Jerry, "I don't know just what he was going to do when we went in. But I judged Mornick wouldn't have the nerve to harm me, and I imagined Vince's appearance might—well, upset things some. Enough to get Mickey out of jail, anyhow."

"Wasn't that Barney," he said that all right. And you did it brave thing, Jerry. You disagreed with me on politics, but I and I still think Mickey's a great man—but there's nothing I can ever do for you that I won't. Whether you like it or not, it's one of the one thing that's puzzling me, Jerry... What's become of this Talton fellow? I'd like to thank him, too. Because, from what you tell me, nothing could have

Is it love that dictates Sheila's question? Or gratitude? And what did happen to Brad after he landed Vince and Jerry safely back at Boston airport? You will find the answer in Monday's chapter of this unique serial romance of modern Boston.

Although some old Boston and Seaside Bill names are used in this story for better Boston character, they are not actual persons.

"I've never handled cameras like these big machines on the movie sets but with this I can bring home some good shots that the big fellows never can get," Beal said as he boarded the train.

"My favorite actress? I don't know," he said in reply to a query. "All my favorite actresses so there won't be anyone in particular that I'll look for. Tonight Beal will reach Chicago. From the mid-west metropolis he will continue eastward on the latest Santa Fe railroad streamliner to Los Angeles, arriving early Tuesday.

FINDS '13' IS LUCKY

At Hollywood he will live at the famous Roosevelt Hotel. Private cars will take him on tours to studios, clubs, theaters and restaurants where the screen stars live, work and relax.

Much of his time will be spent at the Paramount lot, where visits with Carol Lombard, Claudette Colbert, Martha Raye and other headliners of the world make his headquarters.

"As Beal spoke of his intention of recording the trip by film, he remarked that '13' must be his lucky number, rather than unlucky number. It was film No. 13 in his camera which he had picked up in a picture and his Hollywood bound train pulled out on Track 13 at South Station.

These dogs were taken to England about 1840 where they soon became popular because of their great strength and beauty. They are good-tempered and about 25 to 35 inches high and weigh about 150 to 200 pounds. They have massive heads, square muzzles and straight legs. The hair is rough. Colors are white with red and white and brindle.

Polly Wardwell Bride Today Of Chauncey K. Hutchins

By BETTY ALDEN

THE WEDDING guests thought they had walked into a springtime oasis in a winter wonderland as they arrived at Emmanuel Church this noon for the wedding of Polly Wardwell to Chauncey K. Hutchins...

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon E. Wardwell of Brookline and Mr. Hutchins the son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hutchins of Chicago...

The diminutive dark eyed bride was the essence of dignity in a simple satin gown, made with a high rolled collar and long, tight sleeves...

The attendants were gowned in beautiful French creations of dusty pink taffeta made with square necks, short puffed sleeves and full skirts...

Union of Winsor and Princeton Graduates

JOHN J. BORLAND of Chicago came on to act as best man for his brother-in-law...

Following their honeymoon Mr. Hutchins and his bride will live in Lake Forest, Illinois...

Lucy Cochrane to Make Debut Tonight

ONE OF THE GAYEST PARTIES of the whole debutante season will take place this evening when Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Pickman, Jr., of Commonwealth avenue, present Mrs. Pickman's daughter, Lucy Cochrane, to Boston society...

Their beautiful white stone mansion will be transformed into a scene of unbelievable beauty...

Both Mrs. Pickman and her two daughters, Lucy and Nancy are attractive blondes and the colors they have chosen for their gowns will harmonize perfectly with each other and the flower background before which they will receive...

Ace of Clubs Aids Dance Smart Set Flocks to Somerset For Pre-Lenten Benefit

Quite the gayest of pre-Lenten soirees was the Ace of Clubs annual supper dance, last evening in the Somerset's Louis XIV ballroom.

Scores of dinner parties preceded the event, one of the gayest ever held to aid club's charity work...

Mrs. Tip Barry was most attractive in black crepe, an unusual contrivance of orange blossoms setting her costume, Gladys Carey, Ace of Clubs president, chose orchids to effect her date from the guests...

The evening was an especially joyous one for the Belmont McCarthys. They had been guests of honor at Mrs. Stephen Higgins' dinner in Brookline before coming on to the dance...

Mrs. William McCarthy, who had done a fine job in compiling the sponsors' list, cut a smooth figure in her platinum gray satin affair...

Stirring, ermine and gorgeous bloom were much in evidence. Long dresses added another formality in the charity fest...

In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths.—Proverbs III, 6.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Bunyan McLeod, First Presbyterian Church, Hyde Park. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. William E. Gregory, Congregational minister, Boston.

The Editor Says:

REAR ADMIRAL WILLIAM G. DUBOSE, chief of Navy construction, did not talk very intelligently or foresightedly when he told the House Naval Affairs Committee that construction of battleships on the Pacific Coast is "impractical."

The most practical thing this country could do, as it embarks on a vast $1,000,000,000 program of naval construction and replacement, would be to build up naval construction and repair facilities on the West Coast WHERE THE FLEET IS BASED—NOW!

Admiral Dubose must know that in the event of war on the Pacific, the ships of the fleet cannot jam the Panama Canal and then wait their turns for overhauling and repairs at Atlantic Coast yards.

There is more to a Navy than ships. Back of the fleet must be accessible yards and skilled mechanics. The billion-dollar expansion program will take eight or ten years to complete.

There is ample time to overhaul West Coast Navy Yards to handle battleship construction, encourage owners of private ways to put their plants in shape for larger naval building and train mechanics in ship-building and repair.

THE RECORD SHOWS

—that the Navy has not always thought battleship construction on the Pacific Coast "impractical." The U. S. S. California, 32,500-ton flagship of the United States fleet, slid from Mare Island Navy Yard ways.

The U. S. S. Montana, a 42,500-ton battleship was assigned for construction at Mare Island before it was scrapped by agreement with England at the Washington arms limitation conference.

What has been done once can—and in this case—MUST be done again.

Congress should appropriate ample money to overhaul and re-equip the Mare Island and Bremerton Navy Yards, fit them for battleship construction and follow that up by ordering construction of one-half or at least one-third of the new and replacement construction slated to be laid down in coming years in these and private West Coast yards.

That, Admiral Dubose, is the "practical" thing to do.

And what this country needs is a government which is PRACTICAL.

TROUBLE IN "UTOPIA"

"The Boston Housing Authority today began selection of 1016 tenants for the Old Harbor Village low-rent housing development in South Boston."—Boston Evening American.

The men whose task it is to select the 1016 fortunate tenants from the 4046 applicants deserve an abundance of sympathy. Solomon himself might have run away from such a job.

Old Harbor Village was built with the taxpayers' money. Everybody is in some way a taxpayer. Consequently it is only natural for each of the 4046 tax-paying applicants to think that he has a perfect right to move into this "Utopia."

Resentment—and a great deal of it—is bound to result, no matter in whose favor the "judges" decide. That's certain.

Even more like dynamite is the Old Harbor regulation that no tenant may earn more than five times the amount he pays for rent.

What if the tenant receives an increase in salary? Will he have to move?

WOMEN ON THE JURY

"The arguments raised against jury service for women are just as flimsy as the propaganda used years ago against woman suffrage."—Senator Sybil Holmes.

Miss Holmes, fighting for a law to permit Massachusetts women to serve on juries, speaks the truth. Most of the arguments offered by the opponents are silly.

Women have demonstrated their ability in business, in the professions, in every field of endeavor. Nobody today sincerely believes that they are mentally inferior to men.

Only one question balks the passage of the women-on-the-jury bill. It is: DO WOMEN REALLY WANT THAT DISAGREEABLE TASK?

Few men relish the job of having to decide an accused person's guilt or innocence. Certainly no man is ever very anxious to render a decision that means the sending of another human being to the electric chair.

CAGES FOR INEBRIATES

"Wherein today considered a threat by Mayor William E. Kane to parade intoxicated persons through the streets in a lion's cage."—Fridley's Boston Evening American.

Mayor Kane's plan to curb drunkenness by caging and making a public spectacle of drunks has much publicity value; little practical merit.

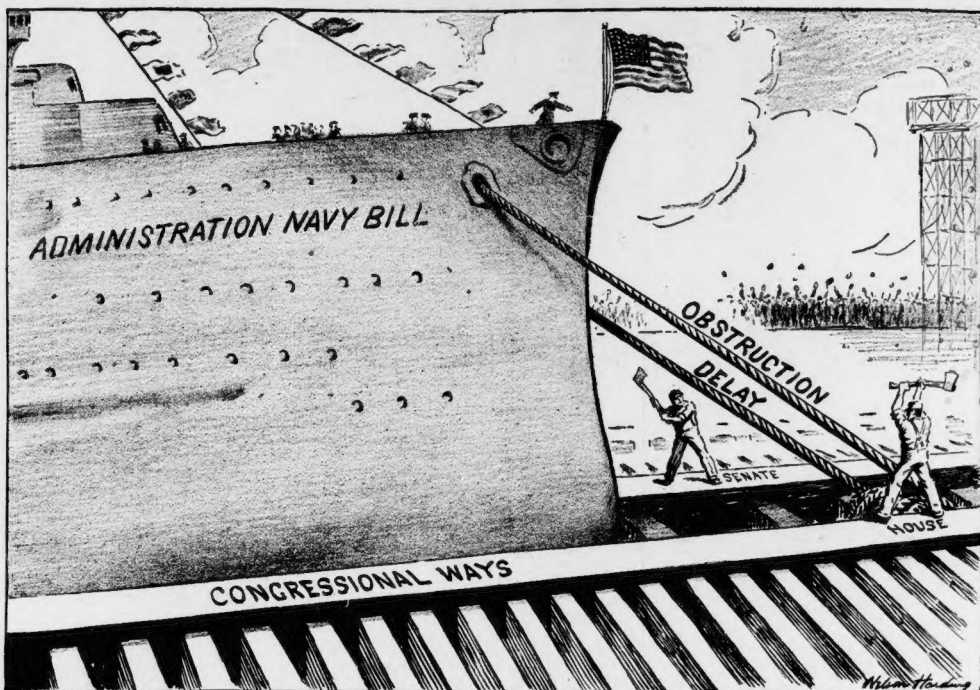

Like the recent suggestion that whipping posts and ducking stools be dragged out of museums and set up in various parts of the State, it appears to be only another gust of official hot air.

Common sense says that Massachusetts laws regulating the sale and use of alcoholic beverages are ADEQUATE. We do not have to return to the punishments of the Middle Ages to effect sobriety.

Woburn is a good city, a sensible city. Let it continue so. Let it not make itself the laughing-stock of the nation.

Launch It!

By
Nelson Harding

The Roosevelt Administration's Navy Bill is ready for launching.

In the hearings before the Naval Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives the Pacificists and the Internationalists have had their say—and have convinced nobody that the national security should be jeopardized by an inadequate and obsolescent defense. They have only DELAYED action.

Following them, the "Little Navy" squad, the cowboy Admirals and the parlor-chair strategists have been "questioning" the Navy's plans as recommended for enactment by the President.

They are serving only to OBSTRUCT action.

Congress should cut away the delay and the obstruction, and send the Navy Bill down the ways. Our future peace and safety demand action NOW!

Human Side of the News

By
Edwin C. Hill

THERE will be an interesting, important and colorful story for the newspapers to cover in April when the great king salmon comes back from the sea and start up the Columbia river to spawn.

The great salmon run will be the test of the $7,200,000 fish elevators and elevators built into the Bonneville dam by Army engineers in the hope of saving an industry which yields $15,000,000 a year.

Five times the height of the Empire State Building is the ascending chain of pools, each fed by a waterfall from the one above, with a one-foot drop, each about 40 feet long, 15 feet wide and 6 feet deep. Alongside will be four great fish elevators with elaborate controls to give swift and instantaneous service to the up-bound salmon.

The elevator cage, below the bottom water level, is a huge fish trap. The touch of a control lever, manned day and night, will shoot it up to the top level of the dam, release the fish in a flume giving into the stream, and leave them free to thrust their way on up the river on the good old-fashioned way without further governmental aid.

It would be nice if the government could do the same for the poor fish out of a job. Old George Redhawk, chief of the Cayuse Indians, and other elder statesmen of the Cayuse and Kiklat tribes, squat on their heels at Celilo Falls and anxiously watch the building of the salmon ladders. Their living is at stake and it was they who first imported the engineers to clear a gangway for the returning salmon.

They are not the only ones concerned. All up and down the Pacific coast, there is anxiety among multitudes of people who earn their livelihood, directly or indirectly from the salmon industry.

Will the fish use the escalators and elevators? Never before has there been such human concern over the thoughts of a fish while thinking, as the late Old McIntyre, of fresh and beloved memory, might have put it.

The salmon is an anadromous or ascending fish. Thrashing up through the rapids, it battles its way to the highest possible river level to hatch its young. The fingerlings swim downstream to the sea, as the oldsters, following an urge of the inexorable life force try to climb still further, perhaps battling their selves to death against the rocks.

Sporting fishermen along the Columbia, schooled in the instinctive behavior of the great Chinook, or king salmon, are skeptical about the fish ladders. They say steel and concrete, even cunningly and helpfully devised, are alien elements in this sensitive, age-old life cycle and that the fish will not use them.

That Bonneville fish hurdle will make a fascinating field day next April, not only for those with commercial or sporting interest at stake, but for science as well. The power gains of the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams will be a Pyrrhic victory if they end this magnificent life venture, the vivid spectacle of the annual upswamp of the salmon, and the livings of thousands of workers and investors. This will happen unless the engineers have found a way to tool the homeowners on up the river.

March of Events

By
Benjamin DeCasseres

"WOMAN is the lesser man," said Lord Alfred Tennyson. And Senator Borah indorses Tennyson.

When the proposed 14-year-old equal rights amendment, sponsored by the National Woman's Party, was up for hearings pro and con recently before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, the Idaho Senator said:

"Does a woman have a right to work in dangerous places equally with men? It seems to me they are trying to do what the Lord God failed to do in making men and women."

Inequality is not only the law of life but the law of the sexes.

New York Day by Day

By
O. O. McIntyre

(One of a series of articles prepared by O. O. McIntyre before his sudden death.)

NOTHING ever startled most of us into those goitly questioning gazes, such as distinguish Zasu Pitts and Ed Wynn, like the ladies' hats recently. The decades revealed queer millinery, but never has the art gone on such a cock-eyed binge. Anything goes!

In one block we turned to see something that suggests a steeplechase reaching for the moon and discover it is Lillian Gish wearing something by Suzy. A little further along we may bump into lovely Lynn Fontanne with a misplaced pen-wiper dangling over a left eye.

We laugh, ho, ho, at fashion's modern furbelows. Yet I wonder if any feminine head-dress is more outrageously hilarious than the old-fashioned sun-bonnet, which we have sentimentalized in song, story and poem until it seems almost a pretty thing.

Seeing a face inside a sunbonnet was like peeking into a tunnel. Yet Sunbonnet Sue swinging on the garden gate are a part of our sentimental lore. Today they are a bit funny, but not half as comical as the hats seen about The Colony at lunch time will be 20 years from now.

The change in mourning millinery, too, is worth a paragraphic twirl. Yesterday, for instance, I came upon a young woman recently divorced. Her husband's passing ended a happy romance. Yet there was, sensibly enough, nothing in her dress and manner suggesting sorrow.

One could not help but recall the good widows of other days. The tight-fitting black bonnet with mourning veil to heels, cumbersome, macabre, depressing. Often the only relief the rest of their lives was a touch of white edging to collars and cuffs after 20 years or so of epitomizing grief.

That reminds me that outside Joe Laurie, Jr., one never sees a cap save on the golf course or shipboard. Or perhaps Damon Runyon at the races. The gangster films knocked them into what might be called, paradoxically enough, a "cocked hat." The cap suggests talk out of the side of the mouth and that classic of underworld vulgarity: "What do you hear from the mob?" Caps—pssst, like that!—swout the way of the walking stick. There should be a revival.

It takes a gay '30 film or play to show as low devastatingly ridiculous styles look after a wail of years. My wife can make folk for dinner almost laugh themselves sick by showing a cabinet photo of mine picturing my costume of peg-top trousers, a dinky coat hitting above the hips, bulldog-toed tan oxfords and a gate-scar collar topping a red puff tie. But it was about the hottest caprice in our crotch of the creek when it first loomed over the ridges.

Out of a lengthy past of indulging in and watching from side lines changing styles for men only one strikes me worth preserving. That is the stock. Neatly adjusted, almost anyone can look smart wearing one. It has no concern for years. William Faversham in his 70's looks as spruce in one as young Noel Coward—both of whom are pronounced expurgates.
